SUPPOSED CHIMNEY FIRE

ON WASHINGTON STREET About 9.10 o'clock Wednesday night the fire department received a telephone call for what was thought to be a chim-nay fire at the residence of E. LaRue Bliven, 228 Washington street. The dep-

Bilven, 228 Washington street. The deputy chief and Main street chemical responded to the cak.

A small quantity of paper was thrown on a wood fire in the house and immediately blazed up, sending a shower of sparks up the chimney, which gave the impression that the chemney had caught.

A check for $15, accommanded by a letter complimenting the local fire department, has been received by Chief Howard L. Stanton from the Ufferd Textile company. The letter expresses the gratifude of the company for the efficient services pendered at a recent fire at the plant. The money will be added to the pension fund.

TREES AND EVERGREENS

STOLEN FROM WILDS Complaint that an organized syndicare of New York decorators composed of foreigners has been stealing shrubs, feltage and trees in Connecticut to the value of over $500,000 a yeller, and doing great of over $560,000 a yeller, and doing great damage to property, has been made to the same police by Philip P. Wells of Middletown, president of the Connecticut Forestry association. The plandering is not limited to the theft of Christmat trees and greens by any means, according to the complaint, but a large part of K is done in the summer and fail, and the stoian vegetation kept in storage for the New York winter trade.

This syndicate sends motor trucks into this state carrying poorly paid men who usually drive to secluded places to take what they can get their hands on without permission. Much of the material gathered is used for decorations furnished for social functions in the city. The state police are keeping a sharp lookout state police are keeping a sharp lookout and a hw plamed by the 1921 seemon of the legislature gives them the right to stop any automobile or other vehicle carrying shrubbery or trees of any kind to ascertain if the owner's written ; mission to take them had been secured those found in possession.

State Forester W. O. Pilley said that he did not believe the time had come in observance of the Tuletide festival as urged by the extension service of the New York state-Elliege of forestry. The New York state-change of forestry. The cost of the Christman trees, the growing difficulty of obtaining them, and the smorifice of the trees for a "one-day celebration" are cited as among the cause which, it is thought at the state college, will join forces to make the Christman tree a thing of the past.

"The thing to do is fit raise Christman tree at thing of the past."

"The thing to do is to raise Christmas trees," said Forester Pffley. "We can raise all we need on land now wasted. and the Christmas tree industry could be made a by-product of the timber indus-try." He pointed out that only in a few places in Connecticut were Christmas of the trees cut in ellis state, he mid, were stolen, and for several days prior to Christmas it was necessary to keep two men on guard at a state experiment sta-tion at Rainbow where many destrable tion at Hainbow where many desirable trees have been grown.

The Connecticut state forester agrees with Affred Gualdil, state forester of New Jersey, who considers the production of Christmas trees a perfectly legitlmase in-
